

March roars, again disrupts Estill County lives

By LISA BICKNELL

Just as the snowfall from two weeks ago was about to melt away, winter came roaring back with a vengeance.

Last Wednesday about three inches of rain fell on an already saturated landscape.

Creeks and streams quickly flooded, and many residents of the county found themselves unable to travel in some areas.

Broadway flooded near Ravenna when a culvert under the railroad became clogged with leaves and debris, causing a back-up in the street. A few people were evacuated and several cars were almost submerged in standing water.

Wednesday night, the temperatures bottomed out, and precipitation changed over to snow.

By Thursday morning, a fresh blanket of five to seven inches of snow covered the ground in Estill County.

Friday morning saw record-setting cold for the month of March with temperatures plunging to zero or below. Meanwhile, the creeks and river continued to rise.

Residents of the Miller's Creek area became water bound behind the rising river, and a break in a water line that crosses the river further complicated their situation. More than two hundred residents in that area have been without city water for days.

Nivra Lainhart was one of those residents. She said the water covering Hwy. 1571, or Millers Creek Road, was the highest that she had every seen.

Irvine reports on water intake

Fire Chief Tony Murphy said the past week has been a very trying time for the first responders and he's glad it is over. He reported two apartment fires in the past week and said there were many other calls due to the bad weather.

Councilwoman Janice Bush asked about the water situation, and Chad Neal said the "pumps are back up and running."

He said divers came from McCreary County twice in a week to try to fix the problems with the intake from the river.

Ravenna Council addresses flooding, audit

By LISA BICKNELL

CV&T News Editor

Ravenna Fire Chief David Harvey said the Ravenna fire department has had a busy couple of months as they have responded to everything from apartment fires to frozen pipes to the flooding on Broadway.

On Wednesday, a section of Broadway near Ravenna flooded, forcing some evacuations from homes and partially submerging cars when a culvert running under the railroad became clogged with leaves and debris, resulting in water pooling behind the clogged drain.

Harvey said within minutes

On Monday morning, 2,000 customers were again without water, and a county-wide critical water shortage and boil water advisory was issued.

Flooding caused the water intake below the water treatment plant to become clogged with debris again, resulting in a lower water supply. Water that is usually pumped in at 1,100 gallons per minute was only coming in at 250 to 600 gallons per minute.

IMU attempting to blow out the screen every two hours with air pressure, but a slump in the bank further hindered flow through the intake. Divers from Marine Solutions in McCreary County began working to assess the situation at 7 a.m. on Monday.

A water distribution center was re-opened at the Estill County Fair Barn and will remain open until the water issues are resolved.

During the last critical water shortage, many residents filled tubs with snow for melting to flush

From flooding to freezing to frosty, Estill Countians saw a little bit of everything last week. Above, a culvert became clogged with leaves and debris below a railroad underpass, which caused water to back up in this low-lying area on Broadway. Below, by Friday the skies had cleared and the temperature plummeted, creating frost on everything and picture perfect views everywhere.

Divers (above) from Marine Solutions in McCreary County were called on two times in the past week to unclog the intake to the water plant. Flooding and the resulting onslaught of debris has created lots of problems with the intake pipe over the past few weeks.

of the drain being unclogged, the water subsided.

“CSX is going to have to work it out,” he added, noting that the back-up had happened a couple of times before over the past couple of years, just not as bad.

Harvey also reminded the residents of Ravenna to be more aware of the visibility of the address numbers on their homes.

“Seconds count,” he said. “We need house numbers to be visible.”

In other business, Mayor Estine Tipton said the city’s Municipal Road Fund is being audited for the years of 2010 through 2014.

The fund is for road repairs, signage and salt, but the city has on occasion borrowed from it to pay bills, which they then paid back.

Tipton said she called Kim Parks, city clerk during that time period, to help go through boxes of records to submit for the audit.

Parks attended the meeting and said there is a paper trail for everything written out of the road fund, and all transactions were open and approved by the city council.

Mayor Tipton said, “Nobody’s hiding things, and we’ll get to the bottom of that.”

Councilman Terry Johnson addressed a drain near his home that he said has collapsed and is causing trouble for him and some neighbors. He said about 50 feet of the drain tile needs to be replaced.

Kim Parks recommended the city apply for hazard mitigation funds for such repairs because the city will not receive new road fund monies until the audit is complete.

She said the unclaimed funds are available toward the end of the fiscal year.

Bryan Kirby, administrator of the Ravenna Scattered-site Homeowner Rehabilitation Project Phase II, brought another resolution before the Ravenna City Council for approval.

Resolution 4 included reimbursements to Spencer Land Survey for surveying the 100 year flood plain for the scattered site housing project.

The resolution also included the administrator’s salary, and some March and April rent payments for residents who are temporarily displaced.

Kirby said asbestos and lead-based paint would be removed as soon as it is dry enough, possibly next week.

He reminded that an ad will be published in the Citizen Voice and Times advertising for bids from contractors for the first five houses, four of which will be brand new. Kirby said the fifth will be a fairly extensive rehabilitation.

Kirby said the bids would be opened on April 1 at the city hall.

A citizen of Ravenna asked the council if there is an ordinance for cats.

We have a cat problem, she said, as she showed Mayor Estine Tipton a picture of cats gathered at the top step going into her house.

Members of the council, including the mayor, said they also have problems with cats climbing on cars and digging in flower beds.

Mayor Tipton said they can be caught and taken to the animal shelter, but the animal shelter does not pick up cats.

Ravenna City Clerk Jamie Hill clarified from the last meeting that the reason there was an irregularity in the amount of money in the financial report for January was because the bills for January were paid early, on December 31, because of the New Year’s Day holiday.

Larry Henry asked the council to change the date of the road block to raise money for flags that will be placed on graves on Memorial Day weekend. The road block was set for April 4 but will be May 2.

April 4 is the day before Easter, and the city of Ravenna hosts an Easter egg hunt there from noon to 1 p.m.

Henry said he will supply the eggs, but he is asking for help for purchasing the candy and treats and stuffing the eggs.

Volunteers on ATVs drove out the railroad tracks to deliver jugs of water to her house and some of her neighbors’ homes.

Lainhart said River Road was covered in several places that she’d never seen covered before.

Flooding has hindered efforts by the water company to repair leaks, but a new section of line was scheduled to be laid on Wednesday.

Saturday’s warm-up melted a lot of snow, further contributing to the flooding.

County Judge-executive Wallace Taylor said the river crested at 31 feet on Saturday. He called it the biggest flood in ten or twelve years.

On Monday, because of continued water issues, there was still no school.

was found on Monday and was being prepared, but a leak at the east end of the county might not be repaired until next Monday.

First on the agenda during Monday night’s Irvine City Council meeting was the recommendation of Regina Robertson to the IMU Board of Commissioners.

The council voted no on the recommendation, by a vote of three no’s to two yes’s.

Jr. Blackwell, former IMU commissioner, attended the meeting, and stepped forward to explain that he was reminded back in December that his term on the board was ending.

Blackwell said he told Bee Williams that he would serve another term and that it was his understanding a letter would be sent to Irvine City Hall.

During the last Irvine City Council meeting, recommendations were postponed so council members could check to see if Blackwell still wanted to fill the position.

“I am retiring,” Blackwell told the mayor. “I know you don’t want me there, so do whatever you want.”

The second item on the agenda was the appointment of a mayor “pro-tem.”

Mayor Noland appointed City Clerk Robin Powell, saying it was his understanding that the city attorney, the clerk or a council member could temporarily serve as mayor in his absence.

Irvine Police Chief Brad Smith reported that some of Irvine’s street lights have been repaired. He said any resident of the city who notices one not working should contact him, preferably with a corresponding pole number or a description of the general location.

During Nelle Williams turn “around the table,” she said she has been checking with Frankfort to see if “more teeth” could be put in some of the ordinances to persuade landowners to obey current rules and regulations about taking care of their properties.

Louise Holbrook, Irvine citizen, said she has rental property that is sometimes dumped on by renters or other people.

She asked why she should have to have tires and other junk hauled off when they weren’t hers to begin with.

City Clerk Robin Powell said the county usually receives a grant that pays for the county to haul away old tires once a year.

The next regularly scheduled Irvine City Council meeting is Monday, March 23, 2015, at 7 p.m.

toilets and wash dishes, but Judge-executive Wallace Taylor pointed out, “There’s no more snow to melt.”

Taylor said the main culprit of the water shortage is a broken line that crosses the river at Old Landing to Hwy. 1571, or River Road.

On Wednesday morning, March 11, a contractor is scheduled to bring a bore machine to dig eight feet below the river and lay a new 450 foot line.

“In the luckiest of situations,” Taylor said, “that could take two days.”

In the not so luckiest of situations, it could take until Saturday. The project is expected to cost about $67,000.

“We are exploring alternative solutions,” Taylor said, one of which could be dragging a two and a half inch fire hose across the river to supply the other side.

Broadway flood of March 2015

On Wednesday this area of Broadway, above, flooded after about three inches of rain fell. The flooding was caused by debris clogging the drain beneath the railroad track. After it was cleared, at left, the flooding quickly receded.

Police Beats

Irvine Police Department

3-2 Erville Townsend, Jr., 30, of 123 Broadway, was arrested at Liquor World on River Drive. Irvine Police Department Captain

Adrian McKinney received a report about stolen mail from 132 Broadway on February 26, 2015. A resident of the apartment building at 132 reported that she had ordered jewelry that was stolen from the mailbox. On March 2, the resident spotted what she thought to be her stolen jewelry on another female at Liquor World. The female employed stated her boyfriend had given it to her. Video confirmed the story. The boyfriend, Townsend, is also a resident at 123 Broadway.

3-3 Brett McIntosh, of 88 Clearview Drive, 45, was arrested by Sergeant Michael Gross, after the IPD received a call to Marcum and Wallace Memorial hospital that an intoxicated male was threatening to kill individuals. When the police investigated, the hospital video camera showed McIntosh driving to the hospital, which was also confirmed by a security guard at the hospital. When police arrived, McIntosh refused to submit to field sobriety tests, according to the police report. He is said to have agreed to a blood draw, but before registrations, refused it, saying, “let’s just go to the ...jail.”

3-3 Anthony D. Mansfield, 57, of 1475 Low Gap, was arrested at 1100 Winchester Road, and charged with alcohol intoxication. Numerous calls had been made to the Estill County Dispatch in reference to Mansfield being unconscious on the second floor landing outside unit #516. Upon arrival, Mansfield was found to be asleep at said location. IPD Officer Sam Hensley reported that it took him a couple of minutes to get the subject to wake up, and he was not able to stand up on his own. He was arrested for alcohol intoxication and transported to the jail.

3-5 Devin Coffey, 19, of 179 Glory Street, Irvine, was arrested at the corner of River Drive and Stevens after police received a call that Coffey was outside with no shirt on with the temperature at two degrees. According to the police report, Coffey admitted to drinking whiskey out of a bottle. He submitted to a breathalyzer test that registered.150. He was unsteady on his feet and his speech was slurred. Coffey became aggressive and emotional at the jail, and used profane language and yelled at bystanders. As he was being processed at the jail, Coffey was said to fail to comply with the jailer’s and officer’s commands. Jail staff and officers attempted to remove a string the subject had in his hands, and he failed to comply with multiple commands to give it to them. When Officer Gross entered the cell to retrieve the string, Coffey grabbed him and locked his arms around his head and neck. He refused to let go, despite multiple commands. Gross deployed his taser to get Coffey to release his hold, the report stated.

Sheriff’s Department

3-3 Russell Lee, 49, of 30 Lamar Drive was arrested by Deputy Russell Morris after he was dispatched to a domestic dispute. Lee’s girlfriend said that he was destroying the house. Lee screamed at the deputy and resisted being handcuffed, according to the police report.

3-4 Holly Pike, 43, of 55 Washington Street, Stanton, was arrested after Deputy Morris was dispatched to Mercy Primary Care at 1100 Richmond Road after a call that a female was refusing to leave the office. The police report said she appeared to be intoxicated, and she had a juvenile daughter with her.

3-4 Robert Thomas Pittman, 31, of 55 Washington Street was arrested at Mercy Primary Care at 1100 Richmond Road after a call that a female had refused to leave the office. Pittman stated he had taken a clonapen earlier in the day.

3-4 Roy Nealy, of 450 Patsy Road, was served a bench warrant by the Sheriff’s Department.

House Bill 213 would help battle heroin addiction

From State Representative Denny Butler,
D-Louisville

While there have been wide-ranging opinions about heroin legislation this session, there is one point on which we all agree. The Kentucky General Assembly must pass a bill that slows and eventually stops the scourge of this insidious drug on our commonwealth.

As a retired Louisville Police sergeant, chair of the House Budget Review Subcommittee on Justice and Judiciary, and a member of the House working group on the heroin issue, I believe House Bill 213 provides the best vehicle for that outcome.

And I am not alone in this opinion. Members of law enforcement, the medical community, the Justice Cabinet, community stakeholders, mental health representatives, and current and former heroin addicts and their families agree that the policies in House Bill 213 will significantly stem the tide of heroin trafficking while addressing widespread opiate addiction.

As a law enforcement officer, I know firsthand that addiction is a disease, a public health issue. If we don't treat the addiction, no amount of incarceration is going to cure the heroin epidemic. That is why House Bill 213 prioritizes treatment while punishing those who would sell misery and death for their own financial gain.

Those who traffic larger quantities of heroin will receive stiffer penalties. The bill maintains the current lower penalties for those who sell or transfer smaller amounts of heroin, which in many cases is only to finance their own addiction. HB 213 makes treatment more readily available by increasing funding for mental health facilities where individuals can receive medication and counseling to help overcome their addictive disease.

Naloxone is a medication that counteracts a heroin overdose, and making it available to families of addicts and First Responders is a proven lifesaving medical strategy. House Bill 213 ensures this expanded access.

A heartbreaking fact in the heroin epidemic is the birth of infants who suffer Neonatal Abstinence Syndrome, a horrible form of withdrawal, because of their mothers' addiction. In 2000, Kentucky hospitals reported that 28 babies were born withdrawing from drugs; in 2013, 955 cases were reported. That is a staggering 3310 per cent increase. House Bill 213 gives priority treatment to mothers and babies in these circumstances, improving survival rates and long-term outcomes.

Allowing local option needle exchange programs will dramatically reduce cases of blood-borne illnesses such as Hepatitis C and HIV currently causing a public health crisis. Needle exchange programs will also drastically reduce the number of dirty needles discarded in our communities. These programs will also be a first line of intervention, as people who use these programs are five times more likely to enter treatment.

House Bill 213 includes all of these critical pieces that together make up a comprehensive blueprint for tackling Kentucky's heroin problem.

In giving our bill the number 213 we acknowledge and commemorate the birthday - February 13th - of Rep. Joni Jenkins' nephew, Wesley, who tragically died of a heroin overdose two years ago.

The passage of House Bill 213 would honor Wesley and the thousands of Kentuckians who have died of heroin overdoses as well as the devastated families they left behind. Just as important, House Bill 213 would redefine how we help those suffering in the seemingly insurmountable throes of opiate addiction through treatment, compassion and common sense.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the citizens of Estill County,

I would like to know why there is no church service at all in the Estill County jail. It is the inmates' right, and it is the Kentucky state law that church should be offered to the inmates that request it.

I personally know three pastors that are willing to do this, and my church has made several attempts to get that started and have had no luck in getting it started.

I wish there would be someone that knows about the law more than I do who would look in to this.

We need church back in our jail system.

Thank you and may God bless you,

Bradley Joe Young

President Barack Obama does NOT love America

by Virgil Edwards,
The Irvine Patriot

Since the November 4th 2014 midterm elections which saw the Republican Party retake majority of the US Senate and add more seats to their control in the US House, President Obama has launched effort after effort to undermine our constitutional rights and freedoms all under the guise of Executive Authority via Executive Orders. Among the most damning is his order for Amnesty for 4-5 million Illegal Aliens in this country. The United States is indeed a melting pot, a nation of immigrants. However above all else, this nation is a nation of laws, the chief among them is the law of the land that is the US Constitution. President Obama with this order seeks to validate the law breaking by millions of people who have come across our borders illegally or have come into this country on work visas and simply refused to leave after expiration. This amounts to validation of lawlessness. Recently, South Carolina Representative Trey Gowdy said that we must be careful with what we do with the law. This is because once the law is allowed to be broken for political expediency, the law loses its teeth. The law no longer has the respect that it should and will be willfully broken with little to no fear for repercussions.

President Obama has also with the coercive authority he possesses had the FCC to adopt "Net Neutrality". This has also been coined as "Open Internet". This basically turns the Internet into a public utility under the direct authority of the Government. The public message about this action is to tell internet service providers that they no longer can throttle up or down internet speeds. The reality of this action is that the FCC and other unelected bureaucratic arms of the executive branch will have discretion in controlling the internet. This will undoubtedly be used to combat political opponents and their supporters from using the vast resources of the internet to oppose them. FCC can license bloggers, pod casters, radio show hosts etc. very much in the way that they license over the air radio stations and TV stations today. This is a massive blow to our first amendment rights to freedom of speech, expression, press. If anyone remembers from their United States history classes the Alien and Sedition Acts of President John Adam's day, they will agree that Net Neutrality is the online version of that. For those not familiar, the Alien and Sedition Acts sought to censor and punish anyone caught criticizing the President over his positions such as the French Revolution.

President Obama has also taken aim at our Second Amendment rights to keep and bear arms without infringement by back door methods in the recent weeks by attempting to ban certain ammunition. Particularly the ammunition type used in the widely popular AR-15 tactical rifle.

The question that must be asked is why didn't President Obama lead Congress to take legislation on any of the aforementioned issues? From January of 2009 through January of 2011 or the first two years of his first term as president, the Democratic Party controlled both houses of congress and could have passed any number of bills pertaining to the issues mentioned above. I'm not in any way saying that what they would have passed would have been constitutional. I am saying that at least the proper process of the Legislative branch writing legislation and the Executive branch signing them into law. There isn't really but one clear cut reason for this. President Obama would have never been re-elected.

Unfortunately, both houses of congress are led by two career republican politicians that have long since represented the actual will of the people that they represent. I am referring to US Speaker of the House John Boehner from Ohio and Senate Majority Leader Kentucky Senator Mitch McConnell. Boehner has been speaker ever since 2011 and McConnell has been Senate Leader since January 2015. Both have failed to lead on reversing the damage that President Obama via executive fiat has done to this country. They have also failed to take action to abolish the unpopular healthcare overhaul called "Obamacare". It seems that living in the DC Bubble for as long as both of them have has rendered them politically tone deaf and toothless. They both seem content to ride out the last two years that President Obama has left in the Whitehouse.

In conclusion, any elected official that willingly fails to keep their oath of office which is to uphold and defend the US Constitution cannot possibly love America.

If This Old House Could Talk

Marie and David Bryan Eltzroth are hard at work helping me to tear out the old front porch in 1984.

by Jerry Eltzroth

This old house came to life because of a tragedy. The Smithers homestead that was built next to the branch in the holler in the early 1900’s was destroyed as a result of a chimney fire in the 1940’s. Gus Smithers said he could have saved many of their possessions but his mother, Eliza (Floyd) Smithers, kept trying to run back into the burning structure; thus he had to restrain her to keep her safe. It must have been devastating to be unable to quench the flames that were destroying all your possessions and many of your memories. A small amount of their cash was about all that was salvaged from the ashes. Since they still had one serial number intact, my grandpa, Bill Dickerson, took the bills to the bank for replacement. Ed and Eliza Smithers had raised 12 children in that house. I have been unable to find a picture of the original Smithers house. Jake Rose is one of the few people who can remember this old Smithers homestead. The house where his mother was raised had 2 rooms downstairs, 2 rooms upstairs and a kitchen offset in the back of the dwelling. A porch ran across the front, down the left side and across the back until it met the kitchen. Jake drew me a sketch of the layout of the house. Whenever the ground was plowed where the old house sat we would find bits of melted glass, pottery/dish pieces, chimney bricks and remains of metal objects. We have stored these keepsakes.

The house was built not long after Ed and Eliza Smithers bought the farm from Zachariah and Millie Dennis in 1904. There was a log cabin on the farm in the middle of the pasture beyond the branch, perhaps built by the Dennis family. Without a doubt it was the first dwelling on this property. No one alive today ever saw the old log cabin. The only evidence of the log cabin’s existence is from verbal descriptions passed down and a hewn entrance step stone that we found half-buried by the branch.

Eliza had just lost her home and all her possessions. A few years prior to this she had mourned the passing of her husband, Edward Smithers, in 1936 as a result of a stroke. My great grandmother had only one place to turn—her children. Eliza and Gus moved in with her daughter, Lilly Rose, who lived on Rice Station Road (now Blackburn). Aunt Lilly never turned anyone away who was in need, especially family. Jake Rose said it made things a bit crowded at their home for awhile. Plans were immediately formulated to build a new house on a bank overlooking Sand Hill Road. Gus commented they should have built a house near the road long before this. The Smithers were very isolated when living in the holler near the barn. Word was sent to Ruby Dickerson, another daughter, who was working in Dayton, Ohio to come home and open her house. Eliza ordered my Grandma Ruby, “You’ve got to help me feed these men who will be building our house.” In those days you did what Mama said without questioning.

Preacher Fore was commissioned to help log the timber on the Smithers farm and convert it into lumber at his sawmill. According to Jake Rose the majority of the timber was downed on the hillside that borders with the current Charles Begley property with crosscut saws. The larger white oak and Virginia pine logs were snaked by mules and horses down the hill, crossing the branch behind the barn and up the lane to a bank where my house stands today. Jake said they had difficulty getting the logs across the branch. At the bank the logs were rolled onto awaiting trucks for delivery to the saw mill. Jake was about 10 or 11 years old at the time he helped drive the horse/mule team as they pulled the logs to the loading point. Some of the white oak logs were so big that at times it took 4 mules to pull them. Jake’s brother, Ray Rose, told me years ago that the white oaks on that hillside were some of the best still in this area. Preacher Fore received the white oaks for his effort and he delivered a pattern of pine lumber with which to build the house.

The lead carpenter in the building of this double-box house was Millard Lutes, Eliza’s son-in-law. Millard is remembered as being an excellent carpenter, an all around good fellow and could tell some entertaining tales. The Smithers sons and other family members living nearby were drafted for this seemingly Herculean task. Gus, Aaron, Leonard Smithers, Morris Rose and neighbors, like Everett Richardson, were certainly involved in the house raising effort. Everett told me that he and Leonard Smithers dug the well on the back porch. Everett added that he was the last one out of the hole after setting the flat rock in the bottom of the well.

The double boxed 28’x28’ house had 4 rooms of equal size downstairs that were all interconnected by doorways. The upstairs was unfinished, had a front and rear dormer, but was floored. It was built much like a double in that each side had a front and rear entrance. Aaron Smithers dug box elders on the farm and replanted them all around the house. They have provided excellent shade to help cool the house. Three of these trees are still surviving after 70 years. Eliza took her last breath of life in 1948, thus she received only a few years of enjoyment in her new home. Although Aaron and his family lived in the house for a time, Gus was the last Smithers to occupy the house. When he passed away in 1982 I bought the farm at auction.

After I came here to live in 1984 and began renovating the house a new chapter in the history of this house began to be written. The house was well built, sat on a post/pier foundation and still seemed to be very square. The framing lumber had hardened to the point that I had to drill pilot holes to attach nails and screws. There was no wall studs, plumbing, electric or insulation. The only protection from the elements was the double boxing, a thin layer of drywall and wall paper. People were hardier years ago. The Home Comfort kitchen cook stove was the only immediately noticeable possession left in the house. Uncle Aaron had bought the stove when he lived there and wanted it to remain with the house for the new owner. I was thankful he did, because I used it a great deal for heat and for cooking my first couple years in my ‘new’ home. I acquired a used cast iron wood burning stove for the living room.

I had to keep both stoves going full blast those first couple winters to keep warm.

Even with both stoves fired at night my buckets of water from the well would freeze over with ice and I could see my breath when I stuck my head out from under the covers in the morning. The chimney was a very unique design in that there was a thimble for each of the downstairs rooms. After the chimney reached the upstairs it corkscrewed around until it was aligned with the roof.

I was unemployed (by choice) my first year after coming to Witt Springs so I could work on the house. However I spent a good deal of my time repairing my Grandma Ruby’s place. Grandpa had been gone for nearly 20 years and a lot of home repairs had been neglected. I stayed with my Grandma the first few weeks until I could acquire some basic supplies—like a bed. My first night in the old house was spooky. I kept hearing a noise that made you want to hide under the covers for fear of seeing a ghost. This thought came to mind, “Great Grandma Eliza had died in this house and maybe she had come to welcome me.” After gathering all my courage, I tracked the fluttering noise to the chimney. Some swallows had taken up residency in the chimney and made an eerie sound as they fluttered their wings. Once the source of the ghost was identified, I returned to my bed and slept soundly.

When I started modernizing the upstairs I realized there was a storage area in the corner of the upstairs that had no access. It seemed strange that it had never been utilized. Gus had been known to hide his money. Maybe this was a hiding place. I was told they found a $1000 in cash in the house after Gus passed away. He had a jar full of money buried in the back yard at one time and in the barn. I pried some boards off and peered inside this lair in hopes of finding a treasure. There it was, and a big pile of it! But it was not money. It was a small mountain of dirt, leaves, sticks, etc. There seemed to be an entrance to this mound on the far side. Without knowing what I might encounter, I was reluctant to venture any further. I enlisted the aid of my son’s cat, Tiger. She stealthily crept to the mound entrance. Like a bolt of lightning something shot out, through the opening in the wall and past me. Tiger captured the critter before it scampered 10 feet. I pried the prize from Tiger’s clutches, which caused Tiger to emit a frowning meow. It was a flying squirrel! I released it outside. That nest must have been there for years. Gus certainly saw them sneaking into the eave under the front porch but left them in peace. I found one other possession that belonged to Gus that was well hidden, but at the ready. Above one of the front porch posts I discovered lead knuckles. I wonder what stories it could share.

My children, Anna Marie and David Bryan stayed with me the first couple summers. At the tender ages of 11 and 12 years old they shared my experience of living a more primitive lifestyle. They soon got accustomed to the outhouse. Our bathing was accomplished by utilizing a 5-gallon shower bucket I had engineered and hung off the back porch. Marie was not too keen on this shower arrangement even though there was enough foliage around the back porch for privacy. In fact Marie welcomed her return to the civilized ways of Dayton, Ohio. I remember her commenting, “There are too many bugs and too much mud here!” After the old house acquired modern conveniences (electric, indoor bathroom, etc.) the children were more comfortable. They helped me a great deal in my renovation of the house during their visits-- rebuilding the porches and building a new outhouse. The outhouse is still standing on the site where the Smithers first built it. I kept using it for many years even after acquiring an indoor ‘outhouse’. You can meditate better in an outhouse and it uses no water; however, it is a chilling experience in cold weather. After Bonnie and I married she barred me from using it.

The Smithers’ chicken house was vacant. My cousin, Jennings Adams, supplied me with a few chickens and a rooster to bring life back to the chicken yard. Doug Lay provided me with additional chickens. My son, Bryan, was my ‘chicken man.’ He would catch the chickens and load them into my cap-covered pick-up truck bed. Once we arrived home with our load of feathery egg-producers he would crawl into the truck bed and grab the chickens by the legs and release them into the chicken yard. Jennings was overrun with kittens in his barn. Being the wise man that he was, he said, “You children each need to pick you out a kitten.” Jennings knew I could not say “No” and erase the joy that came to my children’s faces. They named them Velvet and Tiger. I have never been much of a cat lover, but they were good company. I had the vet give them their shots and spay them since Marie and Bryan had picked sisters out of the litter. The cats were to stay outside but occasionally sneaked into the house. I had my extension ladder placed against the upstairs window while preparing the window facing for a new coat of paint. When I came down the ladder to retrieve a needed tool from the upstairs, Tiger was nosing around up there. I asked, “Tiger, how did you get in here?” After placing Tiger outside, I retrieved the needed tool and headed back to the ladder. That’s when I discovered Tiger’s ingenious method for entering the house. She had already climbed up the ladder and was about to go through the open window again, putting one of her 9 lives at risk.

The interior of the house is very modern now. Still, when I walk into the house I can feel the presence of those who put so much labor, sweat and care into the building of this dwelling. Bonnie and I have contributed our own share of effort, expense and love into renovating the house in order to prolong its life. Perhaps when the time comes to downsize we will live out our days here. One day, if the house can survive, a new owner will care enough to add to the cherished memories embedded in these timbers.

Mary Eliza (Floyd) Smithers is sitting in her rocker on the front porch of her new home in the early 1940’s. The asphalt simulated-brick siding was added shortly after this photo was taken. Bonnie and I are reluctant to change the siding because it would change the character of the house.

Get a jump start on farm equipment maintenance

from Eric Baker

It may feel like spring will never truly arrive, but it will. According to UK agricultural engineer Tim Stombaugh, it is a good idea to go ahead and get started on your farm equipment maintenance. Doing the repairs now can save time and aggravation later.

If you need to order parts, go ahead and do it to reduce the likelihood of delays during the critical spring days ahead. When you check equipment, pay particular attention to rubber components, as these will sometimes become brittle and cracked during the winter.

Check implements for broken, missing or worn parts you may need to replace. Go over the machinery and tighten bolts, nuts and cap screws. Pump fresh grease into fittings to remove any condensation that may have formed in the winter. Apply touch up paint to any rusted or scratched areas.

On planters make sure moveable parts are not stuck. Also check for wear and replace any overly worn parts.

Electrical problems can lead to time-consuming breakdowns. Now is the time to check for loose connections, frayed or broken wires and repair broken gauges, lights and switches.

Remember to include sprayer maintenance in your late-winter cleaning tasks, ensuring that your spray equipment is ready for the planting season; it could save you time and money. If you take care of sprayer maintenance prior to the hectic growing season, it can prevent time-consuming equipment breakdowns, higher chemical costs, reduced pesticide effectiveness and potential crop damage. Rinse out the sprayer to remove any dirt that accumulated over the winter. Check the pump

EKU student from Irvine one of ten to receive scholarship

An Eastern Kentucky University graduate student is one of only 10 students nationally to receive a scholarship to attend the National Outdoor Recreation Conference.

Jamie Woolery, Irvine, who is seeking a master's degree in Recreation and Park Administration after earning her bachelor's degree at ECU, has received $763 to cover travel and registration costs as well as a year of membership.

"Jamie has been one of the best graduate students I have had the honor of working with," said Dr. Michael Bradley, assistant professor of recreation and park administration "She is intelligent and dedicated. I know that, whatever projects and assignments Jamie tackles, what she turns in will be her best."

A 2008 graduate of Estill County High School, Woolery said professors in ECU's Department of Recreation and Park Administration "never cease to push me and the other people in our program to do the best, be the best, and excel. They push us to enter things that we wouldn't normally do. I would have never even known about this scholarship had it not been for Dr. Bradley. Honestly, they help create the people and professionals we are."

The application process for the scholarship included questions related to how Woolery viewed her future related to outdoor recreation and how the conference scholarship would further her goals.

Woolery, who is set to graduate this May, said her career plans are to "create community recreation in communities that might not otherwise have it and to land a career that will help me connect and understand the needs of the community in which I am working, to further help their community grow and develop."

An Encouraging Word: Unchanging principles that guide

By Howard Coop

As I sit at my desk, I see on the right corner an old inkwell with an antique quill pen in it that has been there for a long time. Then, behind my desk, there is a modern computer with spell-check that corrects my misspelled words and reminds me of grammatical errors I occasionally make. These writing instruments---a quill pen and a computer---are reminders that things do not stay the same. They change, for we live in a world of constant change. In this world, what is new today may be outdated, even useless, tomorrow. Marty Robins poignantly pointed out a basic truth about our world of change when he said, "Even when the air seems perfectly still great changes are talking place" without our noticing them.

Although some rebel against change, change happens and we have to deal with it. Frederick Weisel, an American author and editor, wrote, "Sometimes, however much you plan, however many precautions you take, something happens, and in a minute the world is changed. After that you're the person on the other side of that minute."

Change can be frightening, for the new intimidates. But if one doesn't accept it and move forward with it, one misses something, and that something can be important. A writer who calls herself C. JoyBell C., best known for her love of cake, said, "We can't be afraid of change. You may feel very secure in the pond that you are in, but if you never venture out of it, you will never know there is such a thing as an ocean, a sea. Holding on the something that is good for you now, may be the reason why you don't have something better."

On a Sunday afternoon in the early days of 1847, a Scottish poet named Henry F. Lyte, wrote, "Change...in all around I see." But there is something more. In an ever-changing world, there are unchanging principles that guide one and give stability to life.

LIFESTYLES

Critters and country livin’

by Mildred Arvin
CVT Columnist

I was thinking lately of some of the wild critters my brother brought home when I was a youngster. One of them was a ground hog (or a woodchuck), he caught when working in the logwoods. It wasn’t very big, but it bit him on his hands several times. He put it in a cage for awhile, but in the Spring, he let it loose and it just stayed around the yard and its favorite place to be was in the wood yard where it would lie on its back and sun himself. He stayed around for quite awhile and was fun to watch.

Another brother caught a ground squirrel (or chipmunk) once and made a wooden box to put it in and drilled holes in the sides for ventilation. I stuck my little pinky finger back in one of the holes (silly me), and it bit me hard on the top of my finger. It was very sore for a long time. I never did that again. One time my older brother was in the woods and found a large hoot owl with a broken wing and brought it home and kept him until he healed. They can twirl their heads completely around and he looked spooky with those big eyes following us around. I have forgotten what we fed him – or what my brother did. I was scared of that owl. Back in my childhood, people would tell of hearing big cats up in the woods above our houses. They called them “painters,” which was really panthers. They were cliffs all around the tops of the mountain, so probably were some big cats and no telling what else might have been up there and in the caves. My daddy worked for the WPA for several years in the late 40’s and he would work around the road below cliffs that were all along the road (almost all of the way.) He said there was a bobcat that would be in the woods above the road, and he could hear it in the leaves. Sometimes he saw it, I think with a flashlight, but it never did attack him or anything. I walked around that same road to catch the bus to high school in the late 50’s and early 60’s and would think of that but never heard or saw any bobcats. I tried to feed a baby wild rabbit that the cat had caught once, but couldn’t get it to eat. It might have been injured too badly. One summer a neighbor out the road named Millard McKinney and his wife Cynthia gave my youngest brother and I a buck and doe rabbit. We named them after them. Millard was blue-gray and Cynthia was a big white and dark gray rabbit. We kept them in a cage together and pulled plantation weeds for them to eat and fed them rabbit pellets. You guessed it – they soon started multiplying, and we had more rabbits than we knew what to do with. We soon turned them out and Cynthia dug a burrow back in the bank to have her babies in. We soon gave them to someone who might eat them-I can’t remember who – but we didn’t ever want any more rabbits. They are pretty tough, and make good pets. One dog story I didn’t think to include in my dog tales a while back was about a little black dog called Buddy that we got when our girls were real small, and he was a good one. Once there was a big tide in the creek below our house that reached across the fields almost to the road. Buddy had gone across before the creek was flooded and was on the other side. The kids saw him over there and called him, and he struck out across that wide creek swimming. He came across the swiftest part and got up against a tree to rest for a little while then he swam on across and came out in the road below the old store building. We were all so glad he made it! These are a few memories of mine, but the best thing to do is just leave wild creatures in their natural surroundings. One more story about a big, tame, white duck that came to our house on the creek bank and stayed around the yard and swam in the creek. I called him Donald, and would call for him to come get corn. He would waddle up the bank to eat, or the kids would throw corn in the shallow water by a sycamore tree, and we would watch him dive to get it. He stayed around for a while, but had the misfortune to be bitten on the underside by a turtle and died from the injury. We missed him and never did know where he came from. There were wild ducks that fed in the hog lot, and a lot of them at times, and we would watch the mama ducks with her little ones, all in a row, swimming behind her in the creek. They would hide if danger was nearby. There were also larger ducks called Scobees that nested along the creek bank for a few years. They were mostly black with white heads and raised little ones and for a while there was a lot of them, but for some reason they left, and we hardly ever see one now. We see herons– the big blue-gray long- legged birds on the creek bank sometimes. They probably catch frogs and fish. I don’t know where they came from but I like to watch them fly and light on the pond.

St. Patrick’s Day Recipes

Lisa Bicknell
CVT News Editor

We Americans love to celebrate St. Paddy’s Day. Although it started as an Irish religious holiday, the celebration has become more of an American one. Some of the food traditionally prepared for St. Paddy’s Day include corned beef and cabbage. Why that, you might ask? Because these items were cheap, and Irish Americans were poor. Cheap to prepare doesn’t necessarily mean without flavor, though. And so, the tradition stuck. Here are a few St. Patrick’s Day-themed recipes with a few twists. Honey Marmalade Mustard Glazed Corned Beef Ingredients: For the beef: 1 corned beef 1 medium yellow onion, chopped 4 cloves garlic, smashed 2 carrots, quartered 2 celery ribs, quartered 3 bay leaves 1 teaspoon dried thyme or 2 sprigs fresh thyme 2 teaspoons black peppercorn 3 whole cloves 3-4 cups water For the glaze: 1/3 cup marmalade

2 tablespoons honey 1 tablespoons brown sugar 1 tablespoons dijon mustard 2 tablespoons grainy mustard Directions:for the beef: Preheat oven to 300 degrees F. Combine the marmalade, honey, brown sugar, dijon, and grainy mustard. Set aside. Trim corned beef of excess fat. Rinse and pat dry the beef. In a large dutch oven, heat 2 teaspoons olive or canola oil over medium-high heat. Add the beef to the pan and cook until browned, 2-4 minutes. Flip to the other side. Add the onion and garlic around the beef. Cook for 2-4 minutes more until the other side has browned. Add the carrot, celery, bay leaves, thyme, peppercorn and cloves. Pour the 3-4 cups water into the pot (water should reach mid way point of the beef). Bring to a boil, cover, and transfer to the oven for 3-4 hours, or until meat is very tender. Remove meat from the dutch oven. Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Line a broiler pan with foil, then place the corned beef on top. Spread it with the glaze (reserving excess for serving) and bake at 375 degrees F for 10 minutes. Remove from the oven and let rest for 5-10 minutes before slicing. Serve topped with extra glaze. Serve along side Roasted Cabbage with Lemon and boiled red potatoes (tossed with butter and parsley) and carrots (or you can roast the vegetables too). This recipe is from goodlifeeats.com.

Corned beef and cabbage rolls 1 pound cooked corned beef 1 1/2 cups steamed or roasted cabbage 5 green onions 2 ounces Swiss or Monterrey jack cheese, diced as small as possible 10-12 egg roll wrappers 1 egg, beaten oil for frying Finely chop corned beef, cabbage, green onions and cheese and mix together in a bowl. Place an egg roll wrapper like a diamond, with a corner pointing towards you. Place 3-4 tablespoons of filling in the center. Fold the corner over and tuck it around slightly. Fold up both side corners and roll over slightly. . Using a pastry brush, brush beaten egg onto the remaining corner and finish rolling the egg roll. Repeat until all the filling is used. Heat oil in a heavy pot or fryer to 375° F. When the oil is preheated, add in egg rolls slowly. Fry for 2-3 minutes until they blister and turn dark golden brown. Remove and drain on cooling rack covered with a brown paper bag or paper towels.

Serve with Russian or thousand island dressing. Makes 10-12 egg rolls. Scones Ingredients 2 cups flour 4 teaspoons baking powder 3/4 teaspoon salt 1/3 cup sugar 4 tablespoons butter 2 tablespoons shortening 3/4 cup cream 1 egg Handful dried currants or dried cranberries Directions: Heat oven to 375 degrees. Engineers defeat Wolfe, fall to third-ranked Knott

by Andrew Hatton

The Engineers defeated Wolfe County in their opening game of the 14th Region Basketball Tournament by a score of 59-39. Estill was then defeated by Knott County Central in the semifinal on Monday night. This is the second time in the past three years that Coach Bentley's squad has reached the semifinal.

Estill took down the Wolves in convincing fashion, jumping out to a 9-1 lead in the first quarter and only continued to build on that.

Seniors Deron Miller and Michael Bishop sparked the Engineers early on with their intensity on both offense and defense. Bishop led Estill in scoring on the night, with 14 points. Miller added 9 to the effort as well as coming up with several big time rebounds and defensive plays.

Trevor Jones and Caleb Bonny continued their roles as the catalysts for the Engineer offense, adding 10 and 11 points, respectively. Senior Caleb Click joined the rest of the starters in scoring with 7 points.

Estill outscored Wolfe 22-11 in the third quarter, allowing them to give their younger players some work. Robert Tipton logged some quality minutes at the center position. Tipton cherished the opportunity and responded with 8 points and several big time rebounds. The sophomore looks to be a promising player going into next season.

Estill's next test would not be so easy. Knott County Central, winners of the past three regional titles, was the Engineer's next opponent. Led by Mr. Basketball candidate, Camron Justice, the Patriots are an extremely talented squad that could potentially make some noise going forward this postseason.

Estill fought hard from the tip, but was ultimately outsized and outmatched. Justice, the Vanderbilt signee, was on fire early and displayed a seemingly limitless range on the court. He hit several first half three's, giving the Patriots an early lead that Estill would not be able to overcome.

Knott, who finished the regular season with a 25-2 record, would ultimately win by a score of 56-27. Justice led the Patriots with 16 points despite playing limited minutes.

Freshman Caleb Bonny was the only Engineer able to consistently score on the night, finishing with 18 points.

The Estill squad produced a valiant effort across the board, but wasn't able to do enough to prevent their season from ending. This group of seniors will be sorely missed after being such key factors in the team's success over the past four years. They graduate having added two district titles to the Engineer trophy case. Next year's squad will have some very big shoes to fill.
